General Session - What is our Why? 10+1...and other numbers

Ginni May, ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force

Michelle Pilati, ASCCC Faculty Lead- Guided Pathways Tool Development

As our colleges determine how to implement Guided Pathways, they must begin by determining their own local “why.” In order to define your approach to moving forward, you must first explore and define your local reasons for implementing a Guided Pathways framework at your local campus. Determining that “why” can be the first step in identifying your “how” and can help define priorities.

11:00am - 11:15am      BREAK

11:15am – 12:30pm      1st Breakout Sessions

Breakout A: Guided Pathways 101

Carrie Roberson, Chair- ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force

Jeff Burdick, ASCCC Faculty Lead- Guided Pathways Field Guide

Who? What? When? Where? Why? With the Chancellor’s Office Guided Pathways Award Program providing funding for efforts that potentially lead to far-reaching changes in California’s community colleges, many questions and uncertainties about this institution-wide reform require clarification and discussion to move forward with the support of faculty. This breakout session will consider the basic intentions and potential implications of the Chancellor’s Office Guided Pathways Award Program and reserve time to engage participants in questions and discussion. OR

Although some California Community Colleges are well along on their own pathway projects, many of them are just getting started, and that’s where we will begin in this introduction. What are the requirements and goals? What are some first steps? What are the roles for faculty and academic senates in the creation of guided pathways? And how can a college create pathways that serve a unique mission, vision, and culture? Time will be reserved for questions, discussions, and sharing of experiences.

Breakout B: The Science of Program Mapping and DNA of Meta-Majors

Rebecca Eikey, ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force
Janet Fulks, ASCCC Faculty Lead- Guided Pathways Capacity Building

How do you get started with mapping programs and creating meta-major organization? What are the guiding principles to help colleges build relevant groupings for meta-majors? How can this organization serve the students and the college? How can this process clarify pathways for the college and student support efforts? This breakout will share several strategies for discussing meta-majors and provide opportunity for questions and comments.

Breakout C: Connecting and Re-Connecting with Students

Rancy Beach, ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force
Derek Majors, LA Trade Tech Counselor
Gwyer Schuyler, ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force Counselor

Stories abound of students who attribute their success to that one faculty or staff member who they connected with on campus and who helped them through their challenges. Oftentimes, finding that support may be by happenstance or luck. This session will explore what it would look like if a college committed to the idea that every student should have that essential connection, taking the luck out of it? What does it take to build a culture of belonging and connection for all students, where every faculty member and staff member feels a personal responsibility for the success of all students? What can we learn from our successful special programs and/or processes that have developed a culture of belonging and connection for their students and how can we scale those practices to support all students on campus?

12:30pm – 1:15pm                      LUNCH

1:15pm – 2:30pm                      2nd Breakout Sessions

Breakout A: Engaging ALL Faculty

Ginni May, ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force
Cynthia Orozco, ASCCC Guided Pathways Task Force Librarian
Michelle Pilati, ASCCC Faculty Lead- Guided Pathways Tool Development

The ASCCC supports cross-functionality among instructional programs/services and continues to work diligently to ensure the empowerment, leadership, and voice for ALL faculty... and the work is never done. Come to this breakout to explore ideas of how to incorporate all aspects of instruction to support students in their educational endeavors. Come and engage in navigating what is ahead for faculty in implementing a guided pathways framework.
